Steve Broach is a barrister at Monckton Chambers in London. He has a wide-ranging public law practice with a particular focus on the law and policy affecting children and disabled people. Steve has appeared in many of the cases in front of the Supreme Court regarding disabled people. He was awarded young barrister of the year at the Legal Aid Lawyer of the Year Awards in 2011. Steve is co-author of Children in Need: local authority support for children and families (2014, LAG, 2nd edition). Prior to becoming a barrister, Steve worked extensively in the voluntary sector on behalf of disabled children and adults. Steve blogs regularly on the issues covered in this book at www.rightsinreality.wordpress.com

Luke Clements is Cerebra Professor of Law and Professor of Law and Social Justice at Leeds University and a consultant solicitor specialising in public and human rights proceedings on behalf of socially excluded groups. Luke is a leading expert on UK social care law, the rights of disabled people and carers. He regularly writes for academic journals and he is author of Community Care and the Law (2016 pending, LAG, 6th edition) and Carers and their rights (2015, Carers UK, 6th edition).

Janet Read is an Associate Professor (Reader) Emeritus at the University of Warwick Medical School and an Honorary Professor at Cardiff Law School. Her work focuses on the human rights of disabled children and adults and their families and the development of a provision to enable them to exercise those rights. She is the co-author (with Luke Clements) of Disabled People and the Right to Life (Routledge, 2008), Disabled Children and the Law (2006, JKP) and Disabled People and European Human Rights (2003, Policy Press). For around ten years her research has also focused on the relationship between socio-economic factors and childhood disability in the UK and other countries. Janet has held a number of practice and management posts in the public and voluntary sectors.

Rebekah Carrier is a solicitor and director of Hopkin Murray Beskine. Her specialist work in housing and public law has included successful challenges to local housing policies as well as to decision making and central and local government policy impacting on housing, for example ensuring that families including disabled children needing their own bedroom are not affected by the bedroom tax. She acted in the case of R (SG) v Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in which the Supreme Court found that the benefit cap breached the obligations in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. Her work involves using the law creatively to prevent homelessness and ensure that her clients obtain not just a roof over their heads but appropriate housing that meets their needs. Rebekah receives referrals from and has provided training for voluntary organisations including women's refuges, organisations supporting disabled children and their families, and projects working with refugees and victims of trafficking. Rebekah contributed to chapter 6: Housing.

Camilla Parker is a legal and policy consultant, specialising in the areas of mental health, mental capacity, disability and human rights. She has a particular interest in the human rights of young people in need of mental health care, which is the subject of her doctoral research at Cardiff Law School. Camilla was the main author of The legal aspects of the care and treatment of children and young people with mental disorder: a guide for professionals (DH/National Institute for Mental Health in England, January 2009) and worked as a consultant for the Department of Health on the revision of the children and young people's chapter in the Mental Health Act 1983 Code of Practice (2015). She is a qualified (non-practising) solicitor and member of the Law Society's Mental Health and Disability Committee. Camilla wrote chapter 7: Decision-making.

Louise Price is a barrister at Doughty Street Chambers, London. Louise's practice includes a range of complex civil and public law work. She is a specialist in the areas of discrimination and equality and has particular experience of claims in the spheres of employment, education and service provision. Her public law practice focuses on regulatory law and issues arising out of the provision or retention of information. Louise is a contributor to Professional Discipline and Healthcare Regulators (2012, LAG) and Munkman on Employer's Liability (2013, Lexis Nexis). Louise updated chapter 9: Equality and non-discrimination.

Martha Spurrier is a barrister at Doughty Street Chambers, London specialising in public law and civil claims against public authorities. She has particular expertise in human rights and her practice is focussed on cases involving public authorities, inquests, prisons, community care, children's and women's rights, mental health and mental capacity. Martha has acted at all levels, including the Supreme Court and the European Court of Human Rights. Prior to joining Doughty Street, Martha was in-house counsel at Mind and the Public Law Project. She is author of Freedom to Write: a user's guide (2012 English PEN: 2012) and a contributing editor of Rights and Freedoms (2013, Halsbury's Laws). Martha regularly contributes to Legal Action, the Solicitors' Journal, INQUEST and European Human Rights Law Review. Martha updated chapter 5: Health.

Polly Sweeney is an associate solicitor at Irwin Mitchell, Bristol specialising in community care, health care and medical treatment and education law (including representing parents at special educational needs and disability tribunals) and cases in the Court of Protection regarding mental capacity, best interests and deprivation of liberty. Polly is a member of the Law Society's Mental Health and Disability Committee. She updated chapter 4: Education with Steve Broach and wrote chapter 11: Remedies.
